

The Changing Nature of the Professional Employment Relationship

Session Description:

This session highlights research on the changing nature of the employment relationship of professionals as it relates to recent attempts to maintain professional autonomy and resist deprofessionalization efforts. Specifically, our research examines the role of institutions and professional interests and values in shaping the contemporary professional employment relationship and workplace power structure. We focus on organizational transformation and worker mobilization efforts in the United States, Britain, and Brazil.